

05 Honeymoon

Come be my shade with your long hair,
Be the filling of my embrace.
Be no other enchantments before my eyes
Than the splendor of your face.
Be no other enchantments before my eyes
Than the splendor of your face.

Moisten my lips with your kisses,
Let me inhale all your scents.
More than close we must be together
In an urgent gentleness.
More than close we must be together
In an urgent gentleness.

We'll whisper devotions sincerely,
With purposes so entwined.
Touch the secrets of each other
With our bodies, our souls, and our minds.
Touch the secrets of each other
With our bodies, our souls, and our minds.

We'll follow the moon through the starry night,
Tracing the length of the sky.
With our arms around each other
Our own universe and time.
With our arms around each other
Our own universe and time.

This is the joy and longing in the union between a husband and a wife on their honeymoon, as in the Song of Solomon. This is a holy passion, fully enjoying the love of each other, freely giving and receiving. We are totally committed to each other in deeds and vows. This is good and pleases God as He intended it. What wonders will follow the marriage banquet of Christ and His Bride? The Song of Solomon celebrates this love!
